Headline:
A cold New Year's Day with some bright spells.

Today:
A cold start to the New Year with some lingering fog. Some bright spells, especially in the far south and west. However, Pembrokeshire may catch a shower and cloud from the north will bring spots of rain or sleet. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Tonight:
Patchy rain or sleet will clear to leave a mainly dry night with clear periods. The odd shower is possible in the far west. Turning frosty with freezing fog patches. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Saturday:
Largely dry with plenty of sunny intervals on Saturday but with some scattered showers, in the west at first, and developing elsewhere going into the afternoon. Another cold day. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Cloudier on Sunday with scattered showers, perhaps wintry. Turning breezier on Monday and Tuesday, with some sunny intervals and further showers at times.
